middleware('guest'); } } In the last nine months, about 60,000 hectares of land in the southwestern state of Jalisco has been devastated by a series of violent earthquakes, compounding the suffering of the community. In a video released by the UN in Mexico and Red Cross, the land is seen covered in earth and ash. Many homes are destroyed, and entire communities have been forced to abandon their homes and seek refuge. The last earthquake that occurred in September measured 7.1 on the Richter scale, and impacted almost 50,000 people. Jalisco was the most affected area in Mexico during the last December 7th earthquake. The state recorded nine magnitude or 7.2 earthquakes since November 1st. It's estimated that half of the residents in the state are in need of some form of humanitarian assistance. The remote and mountainous region is also prone to landslides and earthquakes. The UN and the Red Cross estimate about 90,000 people could be affected. The recent earthquakes have triggered landslides in the states of Colima, Michoacan, Guerrero, Oaxaca, Veracruz, and Puebla. The quake is estimated to have been a 7.1 magnitude with an epicenter off Mexico City.

Modern pharmacotherapy for acute myocardial infarction. There have been major advances in the pharmacological treatment of acute myocardial infarction over the last century. The leading discovery has been the use of acetylsalicylic acid to prevent vascular occlusion and subsequent infarct extension. Other drugs have been used to improve the survival and functional status of patients surviving acute myocardial infarction, including betablockers, calcium antagonists, and intravenous nitrates. Perhaps the most important discovery of the 1980s was the advent of reperfusion in the form of thrombolytic therapy for acute myocardial infarction. The majority of patients who receive lysis within the first three hours of the onset of chest pain have a favorable outcome.

Patients with a greater than 70% stenosis of the infarct-related artery or left main coronary artery have a poor outcome when given thrombolytic therapy.

How To Determine If You're Driven By An Evil Lurking In You, Or Your Weak Mind. There are many individuals that were born with a predisposition towards evil. Think about it for a minute; more often than not, the person you found guilty of heinous crimes against humanity, like Joel Rifkin, Henry Lee Lucas, Susan Smith, the list could go on forever, and their MO's vary drastically. They are typically pathological liars, pathological manipulators, pathological perpetrators, pathological very codependent types, and pathological narcissists. They constantly feed on the negatives of every situation they are in. There isn't enough room in the petri dish to breed enough copies of them to satisfy their desires; they are gonna have to reincarnate in some other way. It's not a lack of restraint, it's not lack of mind. It's not having your reasons together, it's not a weak mind, it's not a void in your soul. Sometimes it's a diabolical force that infects a person's heart and soul, and you can have the outward appearance and persona of a well-adjusted, mentally healthy person. The difference between the majority of people and the "evil ones", is that the "evil ones" don't care if their crimes and evil deeds, hurt themselves, or others. There isn't a shred of remorse, guilt, or regret coming through their actions, smiles, and boasts; in fact, they revel in it, and often hire a
