If you don't know how to use them, check out the tutorial below. How to use the SPI Environment Variables With the SPI environment variables you can define the environment variables. For instance, you can define a GSHOME variable as: GSHOME = C:\Program Files\SPI\ Next, you have to define a path variable, for instance: PATH = C:\Program Files\SPI\Program Files\GCC\bin\ You can now use these variables to point to each of the environment variables. For instance, you can type in the command line: java -DSPI_HOME=C:\Program Files\SPI -DGSHOME=C:\Program Files\SPI -DPATH=C:\Program Files\GCC\bin\ How to Set Environment Variables To set the environment variables, you can use the set command. For instance, you can type in the command line: set SPI_HOME=C:\Program Files\SPI A more universal way to set environment variables is to create a.BAT file with the following content: @set SPI_HOME=C:\Program Files\SPI @set GSHOME=C:\Program Files\SPI @set PATH=C:\Program Files\GCC\bin\ In this case, you create a.BAT file using the notepad.exe (see the previous section). You can then run the.BAT file with the following content: C:\My Documents\company> SETSPI.BAT All the environment variables will be set with the correct value. How to Change the SPI Environment Variables If you need to change the SPI environment variables for any reason, you just need to edit the.BAT file and type in the new values. For instance, you can type in the.BAT file: @set SPI_HOME=C:\Program Files\SPI @set GSHOME=C:\Program Files\SPI @set PATH=C:\Program Files\GCC\bin\ How to Set the SPI Environment Variables for the Windows 9x/NT Shell For instance, you can type in the command line: setx SPI_HOME=C:\Program Files\SPI setx GSHOME 648931e174
